

Argumentative Essay about Abortion Disagree

Abortion is a highly controversial issue that divides opinions and raises strong emotions among those who are for or against it. In this essay, I will make an argument against abortion, as I believe that it is morally wrong and goes against the fundamental values of human life.

The most commonly cited argument in favor of abortion is a woman's right to choose what happens to her body. While it is true that every individual should be able to make decisions about their own health, this does not extend to the taking of human life. By choosing to abort a fetus, even at an early stage of development, the act of terminating life means that an innocent person's right to exist has been taken away from them.

In addition to this, there are numerous medical risks associated with having an abortion. These include psychological trauma such as post-abortion syndrome, physical complications such as the increased risk of breast cancer, and future infertility issues due to damaged reproductive organs caused by the procedure. This could lead to further emotional distress for women who are unable to conceive later on in life as a result of their decision made during an earlier time.

Furthermore, medical research has proven that unborn fetuses can feel pain from 20 weeks onwards. This means that any late-term abortions conducted after this point would be considered cruel and potentially extremely traumatic for both the mother and baby involved. It also implies that some late-term abortions may not necessarily be carried out in extreme circumstances such as if the mother's life were in danger or if she were carrying a fatal fetal abnormality; instead, they could be done purely out of convenience for the woman concerned which is completely unethical and unacceptable.

Although proponents of legalized abortion might cite numerous benefits such as reducing overpopulation or poverty levels; these arguments do not outweigh the moral implications associated with taking away another person's life against their will which should always be respected regardless of whether they are born or unborn. Furthermore, other possible solutions exist which could address societal issues such as improving access to contraception or better sex education policies rather than resorting straight away to termination options that take away innocent lives without giving them a chance at survival first.

In conclusion, while I understand why some people may support abortion when considering certain scenarios; overall I believe that it should remain illegal except in cases where there is absolutely no other choice due to health risks posed towards either mother or baby - even then it should only ever be considered as a last resort option only after all other alternatives have been exhausted first. Taking into account all aspects discussed above it is clear that abortion goes directly against our moral values and basic human rights; therefore it should never be allowed under any circumstances whatsoever no matter how pressing the situation may seem at present time.
